Press Release

Jayne Ross Shines in Hickstead Showing Classes

Some of the country's top show riders and producers headed down to West Sussex to compete in the showing classes at The Al Shira'aa Hickstead Derby Meeting.

With a number of Horse of the Year Show qualifying tickets on offer across the Alltech sponsored classes, the competition was fierce, with Jayne Ross proving she is queen of Hickstead.

Taking the Alltech Small Hunter and Small Hunter Championship with Church Rock Cashel, Jayne also won the Alltech Small Riding Horse with Casino III before going one better than last year by winning the Alltech Supreme Riding Horse Championship.

Her winning streak continued in the Alltech Large Hack this time on board, Miranda Wallace's eight year old, gelding, Forgeland Hyde Park, with the pair also going on to be crowned winners of the The Alltech Supreme Hack Championship.

Stephen Alexander was another rider to retain his 2018 title with Lord Alexander in the Alltech Maxi Cob and Debbie Harrod's impressive, Bloomfield Valhalla, ridden by Polly Coles once again proved a winner in the Alltech Middleweight Hunter class before taking home the Alltech Supreme Hunter Championship.

For a second year running the prize for the The Alltech Supreme Hack Championship was presented by the winner of a joint competition between Alltech and World Horse Welfare. Laura Moore from Bristol was delighted to enter the iconic Longines International Arena to present the prize to Jayne Ross.
